>He reached out for her, hoping she was still beside him. Panicking for a moment, a wave of relief washed over him as he realized she'd just moved out of his reach. Wrapping an arm around her, he pulled her back into his chest, smiling as he heard her moan in content.

The light from the full moon filled the room through the open curtains, bathing her in a soft glow. He wondered if this was what heaven felt like. Running his fingers through her tangled hair, he looked over towards the clock on the bedside table. It was late but he didn't want to go home right now.

Placing a kiss on her temple, he rested his forehead against hers, taking a deep breath. Vanilla. She always smelled of vanilla. A sad sigh escaped his lips. He knew sooner or later this would be over. They could not keep having nights like tonight.

Leaving once last kiss on her head, he untangled himself from her brown hair and her body, unwillingly getting up from the bed. He would have to be careful when leaving. Charms had been placed on her flat, which unfortunately didn't allow him to apparate or floo out. Accusations would fly if anyone was to catch him leaving her home.

If only the rest of the world could see him how she did. Her honey eyes saw down to his soul every time she looked at him. No one would understand the connection they had. She was the only one who knew who he was. However, what he needed was for everyone else to see what she saw or they held no future together outside these four walls.

They were made to be broken from the start, from the day she learned who he really was. The day he was no longer Malfoy, but instead Draco to her.

He closed the door as quietly as possible knowing this was the last time he'd be doing so. Tonight would be the last night he'd be able to address her as Hermione.
